

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A communication system, a CTI (computer telephone interface) server that executes a server program, and client computers that execute client programs. The server program can be configured from the client programs to control call handling behaviors for calls from a telephone network or internal telephone extensions based on the configuration of the server program by the client programs.

10991794-1360